

Sleep Dry

At the Jangelicas foundation, we propose the Sleep Dry project under a humanitarian approach to support the crisis that Haiti is going through, after the earthquakes that hit the island. Many of the families that lost their homes in 2010 still do not have a safe and dignified refuge, which motivates us to intervene with humanitarian aid that will reduce the precariousness in which people live.

Justification

In order to understand the complexity of the problems that Haiti is going through, it is necessary to pay attention to the following data:

"The Caribbean nation, with a long history of political turmoil and instability, is now grappling with successive natural disasters as it struggles to recover from a series of other devastating events, including the 2010 earthquake that killed more than 300,000 people and nearly wiped out the capital city of Port-au-Prince (...) Houses collapsed, roads were divided in half and churches were destroyed. The storm occurred just two days after a powerful earthquake killed at least 2,189 people, injured more than 12,000 and damaged or destroyed some 61,000 homes (...) Grand'Anse was beginning to recover from Category 4 Hurricane Matthew in 2016, which left widespread damage. Saturday's 7.2 magnitude earthquake left at least 8,000 homes here in disrepair or in ruins, according to preliminary figures. "

Haití: A una semana del devastador terremoto, la situación humanitaria es crítica | National Geographic \(nationalgeographic.com\)

As evidenced, a large part of the Haitian population suffers the scourge of natural disasters either because they lost their loved ones or because they lost their homes, in this order of ideas it is intended to bring humanitarian aid with the intention of reducing precariousness and making that the quality of life of the affected people is more dignified.

Problematic

Haitian inhabitants in precarious and inhuman conditions, lacking shelter and decent conditions to live.

Proposal of intervention to the problem

It is intended to create Centers for Immediate Attention to Basic Needs: refuge and food in order to improve their quality of life.

For this we propose the support in two factors:

Refuge - Support with tents, mats and blankets so they can sleep dry.

Food - Support with food and hydration so that your quality of life improves.

We emphasize helping mothers who are heads of families and families in the company of children and adolescents to cope with child malnutrition.

For this we need: Non-perishable food, tents, mats, blankets and hydration